The group comprises the main island of Luzon in the N, Mindanao in the S, Visayan Is. and Mindoro in the center, Palawan and Sulu Archipelago in the SW and other groups; only 462 islands have an area larger than 1 sq. m.; bordered on E by Philippine Sea, on W by South China Sea, and on S by Celebes Sea. On the SW adjacent to Borneo and on the N Batan Is. are separated by Bashi Channel (92 m. wide) from Formosa. Has several sizable interisland seas—Sulu, Mindanao, Visayan, Sibuyan, Samar—and the irregular coast lines of many of the islands form many bays and fine harbors, such as Manila Bay (see Map at MANILA BAY), Lingayen Gulf, Leyte Gulf, Iligan Bay, and Davao Gulf. The San Bernardino Strait and Verde Island Passage together form the main steamship lane across the Archipelago from the Pacific to Manila and farther S Surigao Strait and Mindanao Sea provide a similar route across S part. Archipelago forms part of W Pacific volcanic chain, hence all islands are mountainous with chief ranges in N Luzon; highest peak Apo 9689 ft. in SE Mindanao; ab. 20 mountains are volcanic peaks, esp. Taal and Mayon. Practically all islands are well watered but only Luzon and Mindanao have large streams (Cagayan, Pampanga, Agno, Agusan, Mindanao); Laguna de Bay and Taal on Luzon and Lanao on Mindanao are the chief lakes. <sup>1</sup> Area = land area in sq. m. Pop. from 1951 Census.

Three fifths of its area is the N part of Saguenay co. (New Quebec dist.), very sparsely inhabited. Bounded on N by Hudson Strait, on E by Labrador and Gulf of St. Lawrence, on SE by New Brunswick, on S by United States and Ottawa river, and on W by Ontario prov., James Bay, and Hudson Bay. Its general elevation is low but the Laurentian Highlands N of Quebec city average ab. 2000 ft.; the mountains of the Gaspé Penin. are the highest in the province (Mt. Jacques Cartier 4350 ft.). Contains two national historic parks and four large provincial parks. Has many large lakes and rivers; in the S is the great artery of the St. Lawrence in the populous part, with its many tributaries. The height of land running generally NE and SW forms the watershed for many rivers flowing W and NW into Hudson Bay and NE into Ungava Bay. Lake St. John and its outlet the Saguenay river in the S part are best known; this region and the two provincial parks are favorite resort regions. The population is 81% of French origin. Chief industry agriculture, but mining, the fisheries, and forest products, esp. pulpwood, also important. Chief cities Montreal (largest city in the Dominion), Quebec, Three Rivers, Sherbrooke, Hull, Shawinigan Falls, and St. Johns.

History: From 1627 to 1763 this region formed the most important part of New France, claimed as result of discoveries and explorations of Jacques Cartier 1534-41 and of Samuel de Champlain 1603 and 1608-15; lower St. Lawrence site of many new settlements 1615-1763; lost to British in French and Indian War 1754-63 (see QUEBEC city, below). As first set up under the British, comprised the valleys of the Ottawa and lower St. Lawrence rivers; as established by the Quebec Act 1774 the province of Quebec included additional territory W of the Ottawa river and S to the Ohio (as far W as the Mississippi); as result of American Revolution, received many loyalist settlers in region W of the Ottawa and lost to the U.S. 1783 lands now included in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois (see NORTHWEST TERRITORY), the remaining territory being divided 1791 into Upper Canada (chiefly English) and Lower Canada (chiefly French); on recommendation of Durham report 1839, the two parts reunited 1841; united 1867 with New Brunswick and Nova Scotia to form the Dominion of Canada, Upper Canada then becoming the present province of Ontario (q.v.) and Lower Canada the present province of Quebec; boundary with Labrador determined 1825 but changed 1927 to grant more territory to Newfoundland (Labrador); gained Ungava Penin. from Northwest Territories 1912.

2 County, Quebec, Canada. See Table above.

3 City, * of Quebec prov., Canada, on N bank of St. Lawrence river above Island of Orleans and 180 m. below Montreal; pop. 164,016. Port of entry for Atlantic steamers with excellent harbor 300 m. from Gulf of St. Lawrence. Strikingly located upon a rocky promontory which rises from the edge of the St. Lawrence and St. Charles rivers in sheer cliffs; consists of old Lower Town, with narrow streets and ancient houses along the shore, and Upper Town, surrounded by massive wall, part of early fortifications. Exports cattle, timber, grain, and manufactures various articles of leather, wood, etc. Important railroad center with fine bridge across the St. Lawrence; receives its light and power from Montmorency and Shawinigan Falls. Notable for its provincial government buildings, cathedrals, old Church of Notre Dame des Victoires, and the Chateau Frontenac; also seat of Laval Univ. (founded 1852) and many schools and cultural institutions. Its population is predominantly French Canadian (ab. 92%).

History: Located on site of old Indian town of Stad'-a-co'na (stád'-á-kó'ná), visited by Jacques Cartier in 1535 and 1541; first settlement made by Champlain as a trading post 1608. Captured by the British 1629 but returned to the French by Treaty of St-Germain 1632. Capital of New France 1663 to 1763. In 1690 and 1711 unsuccessfully attacked by British fleets; taken by British under Gen. Wolfe in historic battle of the Plains of Abraham 1759 in which both Wolfe and the French leader, Montcalm, met death. Besieged by French force 1760 and stormed with disastrous defeat by American troops under Benedict Arnold and Richard Montgomery 1775. Became capital of united Canada 1851-55 and 1859-65. Allied Conference held here Aug. 11-24, 1943, during World War II.
